

HOW ASSET OWNERS CAN BE SECURITY-CONSCIOUS

GOAL:

The risk of asset owners falling victim to assault, blackmail, kidnap, or stalking have always been high. Even though today's Germany is a very safe country, such attacks do still take place every year. Those affected are usually individuals whose professional or social position puts them in the public eye and are who are known to be wealthy. The perpetrators of these crimes are increasingly targeting the family members of such individuals, as this puts the rest of the family under greater psychological strain and makes them more likely to give in to demands.

Such attacks are usually carried out after meticulous planning and systematic preparations. The perpetrators often spend a long time observing their victims and know their movements in great detail. Certain circumstances facilitate these criminal activities, which predominantly follow the same patterns. This is why it is important to know how the perpetrators go about their business, in order to raise one's own awareness and, as a result, recognize the dangers at an early stage.

How can I tell that I am being followed? How can I notice the danger early on? How should I act in a threatening situation? How can I keep myself and my family safe by taking extreme care and putting specific measures in place? If you do not yet have the answers to these or any similar questions, you should get training in how to be security-conscious.

The training on how to be security-conscious offered by Corporate Trust provides a theoretical and practical learning experience for asset owners and their families. They will learn how this type of criminal activity is typically prepared and carried out, as well as what the appropriate protective measures are.

Special training courses are available for the children of asset owners and for the individuals who fall within the at-risk person's circle, such as domestic staff.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

- Asset owners
- Chief executives/managing directors
- People in the public eye
- Politicians
- Family members
- Security officers

RESULTS:

By becoming more aware of how attackers act, you can recognize the risks at an early stage and react appropriately in threatening situations.

TRAINERS:

The Corporate Trust trainers have many years of practical experience in developing personal protection concepts for at-risk individuals. The seminar is hosted by one trainer.

CONTENT AND AGENDA:

1. Classic scenarios in which asset owners, other at-risk individuals and their families may be attacked
2. Typical modi operandi for:
 - Break-ins/assaults
 - Kidnap/blackmail
 - Stalking
3. The impact of awareness on assessing risks
 - Recognition of danger
 - Security-conscious perception
 - Making a connection between separate unusual occurrences
4. Recommended responses
 - How to act in stressful situations
 - In the private and the business sphere
 - On the roads
 - When traveling
5. Possible protective measures
 - Reconnaissance concepts (in line with official police guidelines)
 - Personal protection alarm
 - Online reputation protection

DURATION:

2 – 3 hours

SESSION LOCATION:

The training is held on your premises.

PRICE:

€ 2.000

CONTACT:

For further information or a specific quote, please contact:

Andreas Radelbauer

CEO

Phone: +43 1 318 0151 0

radelbauer@corporate-trust.at